To-day's outing for sick babies "The Evening World's" Floating Play-ground is to the beautiful Sylvan Grove on the picturesque Kill von Kull, N. J. It is the eighth of the semi-weekly

When the big barge Coxsackie, of the Myers Transportation Company, tied up at the foot of West Eleventh street, shortly after 7 o'clock, there was a crowd of women with little tots in their arms and hanging to their skirts, waiting to board the Floating Playground, though the time of leaving was an hour off. There were bables of all sizes, color and descriptions. Some poor little mites who looked as if they had not another day to live. Children brought into the who looked as if they had not another day to live. Children brought into the world in the midst of poverty in a crowded tenement district are not apt to present fat, rosy faces, but their mothers and the doctors knew that an entire day away from their crowded stoop or smoky house-tops meant a new lease of life to them, and they were only too glad to avail themselves of the opportunity offered.

Caterer Thaddeus A. Judson was on hand early with a corps of assistants, who were kept busy depositing huge cane of nice fresh milk in ley cold corners and cutting up stacks upon stacks of sandwiches. The milk was for the little ones, while sandwiches, eggs, tea and coffee were to be served to the big people who have charge of the children. A trip on the water is an appetite producer at any time and particularly so to a careworn woman who has the responsibility of several children, and there were hundreds of just such on "The Evening World's" floating playsround to-day.

The little ones who were able to run about the deck found many things to amuse them. Strong hobby horses were waiting to be mounted, and many a poor, pale-faced woman smiled with genuine happiness—perhaps for the first time in months—when she saw her boy on a stout wooden horse and his little baby brother snugly tucked away in a swinging crib, breathing in an atmosphere as pure as it was strange to them. It was a sight to behold—and one that would alone recompense the contributors to the fund had they focky chairs for the little ones and two doten.

but seen it There were also baby rocky chairs for the little ones and two dozen.

Folicemen Thomas Perry and Henry hrens, of the Ninth Precinct, helped agreet and Charles S. Younger to ep the people in line, while Messrs, homas B. Quinn and Sherwood Corgeli took the tickets, it was naturally slow work, for "Evening World" doctors stood at the gang-plank and examined each child before allowing it to pass. It would never do to have one with a contagious disease on board and, great care had to be taken.

It was shortly after S o'clock when Skipper Geo. Hempstead gave the signal to Capt. Benjamin F. Stucker, of the staunch tug Robert Haddon, to go shend. As the floating playground swing out into the stream Flynn's excellent band struck up "The Band Played On." Hose those little ones did yell with delight then. It did not take a long while to steam around the Battery to the foot of East Third street, where another stop was made. There was another crowd waiting there. Several policemen were on hand and the Butterfer of order prevailed. was another crowd waiting there. Several policemen were on hand and the best of order prevailed.

Mrs. Many Younger busied herself about the floating playground to see that each child got its full share of all the amusement that was to be had. How the children do love that woman! She seems to know what they want and just when they want it, and gives it to them with a smile that seems to make life brighter and misery further away. She was ably assisted in her noble work by Mrs. Carrie Hasselburger, Mrs. Lizzle Sadler, Miss Aggie Brady and the Misses Alice and Genevieve McCabe., all of whom seemed to take pleasure in administering to the happiness of the children and their mothers. Two of "The Evening World's" corps of physicians accompanied the party ready to attend those who should require their services. Policeman Cornellus Martineau and Patrick Walden, of the City Hall station, went along, having been detailed by the Board of Police Commissioners to go and do everything in their power for the comfort and safety of the little sufferers.

which was filled with smoke, and screamed loudly.

In a short time the halls were filled with tenants, who ran in every direction shouting and screaming. Some made for the fire escapes, while others ran to the roof and over the roofs of the adjoining buildings. Others ran through the smoke to the sidewalk.

The firemen discovered that the fire was in the rear of the confectionery store in a large bundle of bedding and clothing belonging to Israel Wechler, brother of the owner of the store. He had packed the bedding and clothing preparatory to starting on a trip to Jerusalem in a few days. The fiames were quickly extinguished.

Shortly after the firemen arrived a young son of Mr. Wechler ran into the store and made for the money-drawer. He ran out and shouted that thieves had entered the place and had stolen $5.20 out of the drawer. He insisted that the thieves had got into the store by way of the airshaft window and, after rifing the drawer, had sot the store on fire.

There were no other evidences that
